ATR Endorses RSC's Jobs Act

The Jobs Act will get government bureaucracy out of the way of America's job creators

Americans for Tax Reform (ATR) endorses the RSC's new Jobs Act that will protect American workers, allow for the full realization of America's energy potential, and rein in out of control federal agencies.

Americans for Tax Reform President Grover Norquist praised the Jobs Act saying:

"The RSC's Jobs Act is a combination of novel conservative ideas that will impel economic growth, unleash America's energy producers, and cut inhibitive red tape. Big Government's burdensome regulations are one of the key reasons America is mired in a jobless recovery. How can an energy producer get oil and natural gas out of the ground when they have to wait years for permits? How can an entrepreneur start a company without capital? The Jobs Act looks to answer these questions, and many more, by giving America's jobs creators a reprieve from the weight of onerous regulations."

The Jobs Act looks to relieve government pressure in four policy areas: labor, deregulation, energy, and access to capital. From ensuring that unionized employees are allowed to receive merit-based wages to giving Congress veto authority over job-killing regulations to opening up federal lands for oil and natural gas development, the Jobs Act would fundamentally change this country.

The package includes necessary regulatory reform that will allow agencies to properly assess the effectiveness of their rules. Importantly, the bill reins in executive action by unaccountable bureaucrats by providing congressional oversight of rule making, putting legislating back in the hands of elected officials.

Americans for Tax Reform urges Members of Congress to support the Jobs Act, a comprehensive list of conservative ideas.
